The influence of women's empowerment on fertility intentions among teenage and early married couples in Bangladesh. This study aims to assess the relationship between women's empowerment and their fertility intentions among teenage and early-married couples in Bangladesh. A multi-level logistic regression was applied to determine the effect of women's empowerment on couple's fertility intentions among teenage couples (married 15-19 years), early married couples (married 20-24 years) and all married couples (marriage age for 15-59 years) in Bangladesh. Women's empowerment indicators used were economic status, decision on maternal health, contraceptive use, domestic violence and safety, and freedom to go out (decision on personal-mobility). The survey was conducted during 2015-16, on 15,927 couples. Overall, 22.6% of the married couples, 14.6% of the teenage couples, and 13.1% of the early-married couples had no desire to have children within the next two years. Among these couples, the highest number (61.5%) preferred to wait for two or more years. For every additional increase in the level of women's empowerment, the likelihood of a couple having no desire to have a child within two years increased by 2.5, 4.8 and 4.8% for married, teenage and early-married couples, respectively. Even after controlling for other relevant factors, women's empowerment is found to have a significant effect on couple's fertility intentions. Archive for the 'Banksia baxteri' Category This is a really amazing place to be, because all you can see outside the door is bushland. But that is not the only feeling this refuge has, because if you are lucky enough to be here at the right time of day, the rock and soil has a bronze look when there is a sunset, and it looks as if the rocks themselves are glowing. This is a stunning place. You walk down a very long driveway through gardens, to a free to use toilet, where you find maps of the track ways within the perimeter of the refuge. A path leads down to a bridge, this is a view of the expansive reserve where the animals congregate at night. You can wander down to a rocky beach for a swim if you need to. The west coast of Marion head is less than a 3-hour drive to Perth. At the lowest of tides, you can walk down across the rocks for a while along a look over the water.

Heat exchangers having a continuous fiberglass or ceramic rod-like core between two sheets of corrugated or plain metal are known. Such heat exchangers are usually made by roll forming a series of overlapping thin metal sheets to an appropriate size for the core and then rolling or extruding the core. However, such prior art heat exchangers have not been entirely satisfactory in that they tend to be bulky, to have a relatively high friction coefficient and a reduced coefficient of thermal conductivity. Thus, there is a need for an improved heat exchanger which overcomes or minimizes the problems associated with prior art heat exchangers and which is light in weight, has a reduced friction coefficient and improved coefficient of thermal conductivity. Lawyer hired for Arthur Andersen's 'death' My go-to guy for legal questions about Arthur Andersen has been my friend, attorney and CLUB member John Vlach. But I've come to realize (via a blog post from our Fool at the Wall Street Journal's Market Watch site) that the publication would have liked to offer Arthur Andersen expert advice on the appropriate way to "deal" with the recent arrests of Enron Corp. senior executives and their felony indictment of Andersen. As an employee of the now-bankrupt energy-trading company, Vlach had access to some rather sensitive information about its demise. (As an additional bonus, since he was one of the prosecutors who led the criminal case against Enron, Vlach is still learning some tricks on how to seek justice against criminal leaders.) Vlach himself once wrote that Arthur Andersen "will go down in history as the biggest case of accounting malfeasance in the history of the United States." He left his secure position at Andersen last year after Enron was accused of operating as a Ponzi scheme, and now runs his own law firm in Houston. He also serves as one of the preeminent writers for financial site Washingtonpost.com. Here's Vlach's take on the Enron criminalization and Andersen's potential liability: "If there is one company that needs to hire a good new media law firm, it is Arthur Andersen." "The federal agents should go after

Mr. Lay and the other indicted Enron executives -- and go to jail for what they did to Arthur Andersen, specifically... trying to destroy Mr. Andersen and his law firm." "What [prosecutors] did was worse than a criminal act, it was
